NAMI's Workin'

Revisiting the Meaning of Recovery

By Bettie Reinhardt

This is the month that we honor the winners of our Inspiration Awards at the NAMI San Diego Recovery in Action Dinner and Silent Auction so it seems a good idea to review what we are talking about and why it is important. Of course, to really understand Recovery, you must attend the event!

Recovery is the process of managing one's illness and disability with the least amount of interference with normal life. It does not necessarily mean being symptom free although recovery, for some people, can mean being able to "pass as a 'normy'" or not having any clinically observable symptoms. Recovery involves increasing competency in psychosocial functioning and cognitive functioning. It is a dynamic, ever-changing process. This means that everyone can work toward recovery. Rehabilitation, that is, facilitating recovery, should begin on the first day of treatment. We cannot keep doing the same old things and expect to not get the same old results. We can do better. Many western countries, in fact, can do a better job of helping people move into recovery.

Recovery requires a paradigm shift, a different way of looking at things. It means that families see themselves as facilitators of recovery rather than caretakers. It means that consumers recognize their strengths and see themselves as the heroes that they are. It means that providers focus on their clients instead of their clients' illnesses.

Recovery requires some risk-taking and some letting go. It may mean tolerating some increase in symptoms to obtain increased cognitive functioning. It often means trying something new. It can mean taking a chance and not succeeding. It definitely means making choices. As we continue to learn more about recovery, we need to review the best-practice services. Remember to think about each service in the context of recovery. That is, it all starts with Hope and then moves to A Better Life.

"Recovery is the process of managing one's illness and disability with the least amount of interference with normal life...Recovery requires a paradigm shift, a different way of looking at things."

People need to be safe and to feel safe. That can mean an inpatient facility or a crisis house or residential treatment program. It can mean a shelter bed or a home of one's own. People need access to appropriate medication and good management of their medication use including physical exams. They need rehabilitation, case management, and assertive community treatment. They may need crisis services or social services. The majority of people need substance abuse treatment. Most can use family support and education and peer support and self-help groups. Everyone needs housing. Too many people need jail diversion or reintegration into the community after incarceration.

Many more people than we typically realized need vocational rehabilitation, employment support, and supported education. Not one service can be dropped or left undeveloped. So? So show up for the next round of Mental Health Services Act stakeholders' meetings and Advocate for Recovery.

Family Matters

By Louise Groszkruger
President, NAMI SD Board of Directors

December 14, 2007 will mark the 4th anniversary of the single most life altering event of my life. On this day in 2003, our 29 year old son, a seven year veteran of the LAPD, was arrested for possession of an illegal weapon. I was stunned, mortified, ashamed, and angry. "How could he do this to us?"

"How could someone who put his entire life into his career do something so stupid and out of character?"

"By attending weekly meetings and family education, we learned that we were not alone in our struggle, that we should never give up hope, and that family and friends could play a significant role in an individual's recovery."

The answer (or shock) came a few weeks later when he was diagnosed as having Bipolar 1 Disorder, complete with visual hallucinations and paranoia. Although the diagnosis helped us understand the events of December 14th, we were totally unprepared to cope with the financial, legal, and emotional consequences of his illness. Suddenly the life we had known seemed to crumble around us as we slogged through a criminal justice system that provided drug diversion but ignored the needs of individuals who are living with mental illness. We mortgaged our home to provide our son with the best legal defense, read all the literature we could find, wrote to the LAPD Chief of Police, and worked closely with our son's psychiatrist. We were overjoyed by the progress our son made in treatment. However, this joy was overshadowed by the judge who sentenced him to a year in jail and told us that he didn't care about mental illness.

Four years ago I was incapable of telling this story. I was consumed with guilt, worry, shame, and fear. However, today I see our family's journey as one of hope, resilience, and love. Our quest for understanding led us to NAMI San Diego and the Depression and Bipolar Support Alliance (DBSA). By attending weekly meetings and family education, we learned that we were not alone in our struggle, that we should never give up hope, and that family and friends could play a significant role in an individual's recovery. We learned to hope as we watched individuals overcome the debilitating symptoms of mental illness. We learned the true meaning of courage as we watched spouses, parents, and friends do "whatever it takes" to assist their loved ones in the process of recovery. As we stood in front of the judge who didn't care about mental illness, and walked our son to the LA County jail, we were not alone. We were surrounded by caring people we had met in our weekly support group.

Today when I tell our family story, I do it with pride rather than shame, and with hope rather than fear. I tell our story because I know that the love, support, and understanding of family and friends can make a difference in the lives of individuals who are living with mental illness.

Albright Information & Referral Center

The Center was established in 1985 by NAMI members in San Diego County and has been operated by NAMI San Diego ever since. James Albright's remarkable and unflagging efforts to obtain the original funding resulted in the Center's being named for him.

The Center hosts the NAMI San Diego Helpline, a lending library, take-home materials, and knowledgeable people that care.

Do drop in and visit NAMI San Diego's "flagship" program!

As family members and friends you can make a difference by:

- Telling others about mental illness – it's amazing how many others are struggling with the same issues
- Advocating for treatment rather than incarceration
- Learning all you can about mental illness
- Attending support groups and education
- Understanding that mental illness is an ILLNESS not a character flaw
- Supporting organizations such as NAMI SD and the DBSA
- Raising your voice against the stigma of mental illness

It's Not Too Late to Push the U.S. Senate on Parity!

Just before beginning the month-long summer recess, the sponsors of the Senate mental illness insurance parity bill (S 558) made an attempt to push for immediate passage, only to have the move blocked late on August 3. Despite this temporary setback, the sponsors of the Mental Health Parity Act of 2007 – Senators Pete Domenici (R-NM), Edward M. Kennedy (D-MA) and Mike Enzi (R-WY) – remain committed to trying again in September to expedite quick action on the bill.

Urge our Senators to support S 558 and oppose any attempt to block immediate passage of S 558 or seek additional changes. The revised version of S 558 resolves many of the concerns about state preemption that were raised by the original version. Go to this web site to e-mail your Senators:

<http://capwiz.com/nami/utr/1/GZPMHMXMGI/ADTOHMXMLW/1348069661>

In addition to sending letters to your Senators, you could write a short letter to the editor of your local newspaper urging support for Senate action on parity.
